

ANARCHISTS MOURNING.

Secret Meetings of Socialistic Groups Held in This City.

Most Haranguing His Followers Behind Closed Doors.

Justus Schwab Closes His Saloon at the Hour of the Execution—His Vigorous Denial of the Action of the Chicago Authorities—Predictions of a Coming Revolution—Editor Shevitch's Paper to Cease Publication To-Day—Workingmen Quit Their Shops—No Public Demonstration Held So Far—The Police Ready for Any Emergency That May Arise.

Herr Most's office in William street was the gathering place of the Anarchist class in this city to-day. In the gray of the morning, Anarchists Torschmidt and Fesselman came downtown carrying a roll of crape and a score of red flags. With these they bedecked the windows, doorways and walls of Most's office and the adjoining rooms on the same floor. The time-worn sign on the chief Anarchist's door, "No reporters allowed," was almost hidden from view by crape and red bunting.

Most appeared at 9 o'clock, and for an hour afterwards the stairs creaked under the tread of arriving Anarchists. The doors at the head of the stairs were tightly closed to prevent intrusion, but Most was heard speaking in emphatic German, and hoarse cheers came at intervals.

At the office of the Leader another crowd gathered. There also was a profusion of crape and placards were exhibited on the walls bearing the words, "Martyrs for Liberty," "Beware of the Insurrection," "The American Revolution is at Hand," "It is the Leader's last day of life, Editor Shevitch and his followers having decided that it should cease publication on the day of the execution of the four men put to death by 10 o'clock. The editorial room in the rear of the second floor was full of Anarchists. Col. Hinton mounted a chair and harangued the assembly on the event of the day in Chicago. He gloried in "Linger in death," the only mercy the bloodhounds of capitalism have left him to enjoy."

"The blood that is shed to-day," he continued, "will be amply avenged. They can assassinate their four men, but 4,000 will spring up to emulate them in their fight against tyranny."

Anarchist Wilzig succeeded Col. Hinton. At this moment, said Baroldi, business manager of the Leader, suddenly became aware of the dangerous presence of reporters and pushed them out of the room.

IN AN ANARCHIST NEIGHBORHOOD.

The Anarchists are most numerous in the Tenth Assembly District, and may be found on all occasions in the saloons at the corners of Madison and First streets, east of Second avenue. They were gathered in small groups in several resorts in the neighborhood referred to this morning, and notably in Justus Schwab's saloon in First street, near Second avenue.

As far as could be ascertained there were no formal meetings of any of the groups. A crowd was found in the saloon at the corner of Madison and First streets, east of Second avenue. It was evident that Anarchists and their Socialist sympathizers had generally quit business and work for the day and were waiting for the four men who were to be executed for inciting the Haymarket riot.

AN EVENING WORLD reporter entered Justus Schwab's saloon this morning and found him arranging the glassware on the shelves behind the bar. Schwab eyed the reporter suspiciously for a moment, and when he learned his visitor's mission, said sternly:

JUSTUS SCHWAB'S INDIGNATION.

"Not a word for the capitalist press. It always misrepresents Anarchists. It does not know what Anarchism is."

Afterwards Mr. Schwab changed his mind and entered into a running conversation, in the course of which he expressed his indignation and regret at the turn of affairs.

"I do not believe in precipitating riots or resorting to unnecessary bloodshed," he said, "but the down-trodden workmen of Chicago had for a moment forgotten their utter desperation by the Pinkerton thugs and the regular police. One poor fellow hurled to his death, and the rights of a man to sell his labor for the best price he could get were denied by the arbitrary police authorities. But I am sick and disgusted with the American public, who allow themselves to be governed by the police-men's club."

REVOLUTION PREDICTED.

Speaking of the condemned men, he said: "Brave, noble lingers! Who can say that a coward's blood flowed in such veins? I am sorry for poor little Parsons. I knew him well. He was an earnest, honest man in his convictions. He had only the food of a man's manly heart; he would not hurt a fly. But he had a brain to direct his tongue and pen, and always used his vigorous thoughts in behalf of the working classes. Parsons' name will never be forgotten, and when this judicial crime is a thing of the past, his memory will be revered as a martyr to a noble and just cause. Why, man, do you try for a moment to think that such men have water in their veins? They are only trying to raise up the down-trodden; and I tell you that if the oppression continues there will surely come a revolution, for the hard-working millions will not stand it much longer. I do not advocate bloody measures, mind you, but peaceful yet firm agitation. The hired minions of capitalism are even trying to deny us the right which Americans have so long boasted—the right to gather and speak freely upon any question concerning the public good. That right has been denied us in Chicago and in New York. Even in King-riden Germany the people of our belief are not prevented from peacefully meeting and discussing our ideas."

Let the blood of the martyred five and the doom of the others rest upon the heads of the unreasonable and unjust men who have hounded them to their death out of mere revenge."

Schwab became very demonstrative during some portions of his talk and gesticulated a great deal.

GROUPS TO MEET TO-NIGHT.

From a trustworthy source it was ascertained that meetings of the groups will be held this evening in First, Second and Fifth streets, and resolutions expressive of the feelings of the Anarchists will be passed. A mourning badge will be worn for thirty days.

President Samuel Gompers of the American Federation of Trades, and Edward King of the Type-Founders' Union, are in Chicago, whether they went to urge mercy for the condemned men. They do not sympathize with Anarchism. They are expected to return on Sunday.

POLICE RESERVES ON DUTY.

Acting on the theory that an ounce of prevention is better than a pound with long day sticks, Supt. Murray has ordered all the reserves of the police force to be kept on duty in the station-houses to-day. Should any disturbance occur the police will act promptly.

Supt. Murray and Inspectors Steers, Williams and Conlin were on duty early this morning, calmly awaiting events. At 10 o'clock word was received that a black flag was flying from a tenement-house on Seventh street, near Avenue D, but that it attracted no attention and there was no crowd assembled.

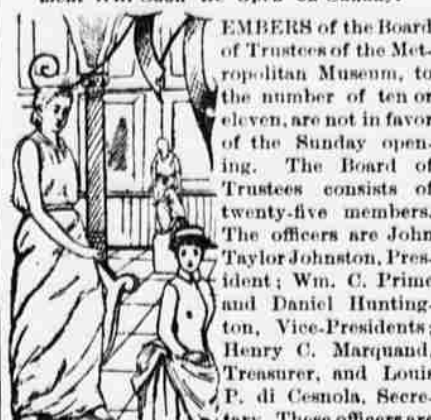

From Union Square came the message:

"A crowd of about 100 persons, mostly men, gathered in Union Square at 11 o'clock. They were holding a meeting, and were singing 'The Internationale' and other revolutionary songs. The police were on duty, but did not interfere. The crowd dispersed at 12 o'clock."

THROW OPEN THE MUSEUM.

WORKING PEOPLE OUGHT TO HAVE A CHANCE TO VISIT IT.

Comptroller Loew in Favor of Opening the Metropolitan Museum of Art on Sunday—President Huntington, of the National Academy, Thinks All Places of Amusement Will Soon Be Open on Sunday.

MEMBERS of the Board of Trustees of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, to the number of ten or eleven, are not in favor of the Sunday opening. The Board of Trustees consists of twenty-five members. The officers are John Taylor Johnston, President; Wm. C. Prime and Daniel Huntington, Vice-Presidents; Henry C. Marquand, Treasurer, and Louis P. di Cesnola, Secretary. These officers are ex-officio trustees and are also on the Executive Committee of the Museum. The Comptroller of the City of New York, Mr. Edward V. Loew; the President of the Department of Public Works, Mr. Matthew C. D. Borden, and the President of the National Academy of Design, Mr. Daniel Huntington, are also ex-officio trustees.

The other gentlemen on the Board are Cornelius Vanderbilt, Richard M. Hunt, F. W. Rhineland, Salem H. Ward, Joseph W. Drexel, D. O. Mills, S. L. M. Barlow, Samuel P. Avery, Hubert R. Bishop, Rutherford Stuyvesant, William E. Dodge, Joseph H. Choate, Robert Hoe, George William, William R. Ware, Richard Butler, Theodore Weston, William L. Andrews, John Q. A. Ward, the sculptor, and John Bigelow.

Gen. di Cesnola is almost the only officer of those for this year who is personally inclined to open the Museum on Sunday. About half of the other trustees are also favorable to this innovation. Richard M. Hunt, the well-known architect, and Joseph H. Choate are among the warmest advocates for it, while Vice-President William C. Prime and William E. Dodge are credited with being the most strongly opposed to the movement.

Comptroller Loew told THE EVENING WORLD reporter that he favored the Sunday opening. Mr. Johnston, President of the Metropolitan Museum, who has for years been intimately associated with it, is in rather delicate health. He did not care to talk upon the subject. It is well known, however, that he has always been opposed to opening the Museum on Sunday.

Mr. Huntington, President of the National Academy, talked on the subject with the reporter. "I am opposed to it," he said. "I think Sunday should be devoted to religious purposes. It is hard enough to get people to church without supplying attractions which will help to draw them away from it. The argument that Sunday is the only time when people can visit the Museum is not valid if the galleries were thrown open two evenings in the week free. The electric light would furnish all the illumination necessary. This has been done, and is talk of doing this."

"What are the grounds on which the trustees base their opposition to the Sunday opening?" was asked.

"They are different with the different ones," replied Mr. Huntington. "With several a religious feeling is the fundamental one. Others oppose the opening on the ground of expediency. They think that it might deprive the Museum of donors, or that some of the trustees would withdraw if this were done. Some are moved a little by the extra expense. Those who are opposed from some reason of expediency would doubtless desire it if they foresaw no unpleasant consequences."

"Have any requests been made with the proviso that the Museum shall not be open on Sunday?"

"I believe that Robert L. Stuart and his brother Alexander left two or three thousands with that condition. There are, however, some large bequests which might be affected by the Sunday opening, and possibly that has been a weight with some. There is so strong a prejudice against it with some of the trustees that if it were carried they might withdraw."

The time will come, however, without doubt, when the Museum will be opened. I think that the theatres and concert-halls and all places of amusement will be full by the Sunday opening on Sundays. That is the drift; things are tending that way, and people look on the Sunday as a day for amusement only. However, if it were carried by a majority, the trustees would not be to write to each member and simply ask him if he was in favor of or opposed to opening the Museum on Sundays."

THE FATES WERE AGAINST HIM.

[From the Boston Transcript.]

The experience of the man in Paris who attempted suicide by jumping from the Arc de Triomphe after taking a dose of poison, and was caught by a projecting spike and suspended in mid-air for a very bad quarter of an hour, lends the color of truth to a similar story which is good enough to be told again, if it is old. Determined to be rid of life, a man took a dose of poison, put his neck into a noose fastened to a scaffold on the edge of a cliff, held a pistol to his head, and as he jumped pulled the trigger. His theory was that if the rope broke the sea would swallow him, and there was also the chance that the pistol would do the business. But the fates were against him. As he jumped off his aim missed and the bullet cut the rope; he fell into the sea, but was rescued by a passing boat, while the water he had swallowed acted as an emetic, and the poison being rejected, his life was saved.

THE FATES WERE AGAINST HIM.

[From the Boston Transcript.]

The experience of the man in Paris who attempted suicide by jumping from the Arc de Triomphe after taking a dose of poison, and was caught by a projecting spike and suspended in mid-air for a very bad quarter of an hour, lends the color of truth to a similar story which is good enough to be told again, if it is old. Determined to be rid of life, a man took a dose of poison, put his neck into a noose fastened to a scaffold on the edge of a cliff, held a pistol to his head, and as he jumped pulled the trigger. His theory was that if the rope broke the sea would swallow him, and there was also the chance that the pistol would do the business. But the fates were against him. As he jumped off his aim missed and the bullet cut the rope; he fell into the sea, but was rescued by a passing boat, while the water he had swallowed acted as an emetic, and the poison being rejected, his life was saved.

THE FATES WERE AGAINST HIM.

[From the Boston Transcript.]

The experience of the man in Paris who attempted suicide by jumping from the Arc de Triomphe after taking a dose of poison, and was caught by a projecting spike and suspended in mid-air for a very bad quarter of an hour, lends the color of truth to a similar story which is good enough to be told again, if it is old. Determined to be rid of life, a man took a dose of poison, put his neck into a noose fastened to a scaffold on the edge of a cliff, held a pistol to his head, and as he jumped pulled the trigger. His theory was that if the rope broke the sea would swallow him, and there was also the chance that the pistol would do the business. But the fates were against him. As he jumped off his aim missed and the bullet cut the rope; he fell into the sea, but was rescued by a passing boat, while the water he had swallowed acted as an emetic, and the poison being rejected, his life was saved.

THE FATES WERE AGAINST HIM.

[From the Boston Transcript.]

The experience of the man in Paris who attempted suicide by jumping from the Arc de Triomphe after taking a dose of poison, and was caught by a projecting spike and suspended in mid-air for a very bad quarter of an hour, lends the color of truth to a similar story which is good enough to be told again, if it is old. Determined to be rid of life, a man took a dose of poison, put his neck into a noose fastened to a scaffold on the edge of a cliff, held a pistol to his head, and as he jumped pulled the trigger. His theory was that if the rope broke the sea would swallow him, and there was also the chance that the pistol would do the business. But the fates were against him. As he jumped off his aim missed and the bullet cut the rope; he fell into the sea, but was rescued by a passing boat, while the water he had swallowed acted as an emetic, and the poison being rejected, his life was saved.

THE FATES WERE AGAINST HIM.

[From the Boston Transcript.]

The experience of the man in Paris who attempted suicide by jumping from the Arc de Triomphe after taking a dose of poison, and was caught by a projecting spike and suspended in mid-air for a very bad quarter of an hour, lends the color of truth to a similar story which is good enough to be told again, if it is old. Determined to be rid of life, a man took a dose of poison, put his neck into a noose fastened to a scaffold on the edge of a cliff, held a pistol to his head, and as he jumped pulled the trigger. His theory was that if the rope broke the sea would swallow him, and there was also the chance that the pistol would do the business. But the fates were against him. As he jumped off his aim missed and the bullet cut the rope; he fell into the sea, but was rescued by a passing boat, while the water he had swallowed acted as an emetic, and the poison being rejected, his life was saved.

THE FATES WERE AGAINST HIM.

[From the Boston Transcript.]

The experience of the man in Paris who attempted suicide by jumping from the Arc de Triomphe after taking a dose of poison, and was caught by a projecting spike and suspended in mid-air for a very bad quarter of an hour, lends the color of truth to a similar story which is good enough to be told again, if it is old. Determined to be rid of life, a man took a dose of poison, put his neck into a noose fastened to a scaffold on the edge of a cliff, held a pistol to his head, and as he jumped pulled the trigger. His theory was that if the rope broke the sea would swallow him, and there was also the chance that the pistol would do the business. But the fates were against him. As he jumped off his aim missed and the bullet cut the rope; he fell into the sea, but was rescued by a passing boat, while the water he had swallowed acted as an emetic, and the poison being rejected, his life was saved.

THE FATES WERE AGAINST HIM.

[From the Boston Transcript.]

The experience of the man in Paris who attempted suicide by jumping from the Arc de Triomphe after taking a dose of poison, and was caught by a projecting spike and suspended in mid-air for a very bad quarter of an hour, lends the color of truth to a similar story which is good enough to be told again, if it is old. Determined to be rid of life, a man took a dose of poison, put his neck into a noose fastened to a scaffold on the edge of a cliff, held a pistol to his head, and as he jumped pulled the trigger. His theory was that if the rope broke the sea would swallow him, and there was also the chance that the pistol would do the business. But the fates were against him. As he jumped off his aim missed and the bullet cut the rope; he fell into the sea, but was rescued by a passing boat, while the water he had swallowed acted as an emetic, and the poison being rejected, his life was saved.

THE FATES WERE AGAINST HIM.

[From the Boston Transcript.]

The experience of the man in Paris who attempted suicide by jumping from the Arc de Triomphe after taking a dose of poison, and was caught by a projecting spike and suspended in mid-air for a very bad quarter of an hour, lends the color of truth to a similar story which is good enough to be told again, if it is old. Determined to be rid of life, a man took a dose of poison, put his neck into a noose fastened to a scaffold on the edge of a cliff, held a pistol to his head, and as he jumped pulled the trigger. His theory was that if the rope broke the sea would swallow him, and there was also the chance that the pistol would do the business. But the fates were against him. As he jumped off his aim missed and the bullet cut the rope; he fell into the sea, but was rescued by a passing boat, while the water he had swallowed acted as an emetic, and the poison being rejected, his life was saved.

E. J. DENNING &amp; CO.,

SUCCESSORS TO A. T. STEWART & CO.

(RETAIL).

LARGE REDUCTIONS

IN ALL DEPARTMENTS.

Purchasers will find themselves amply repaid by a visit of inspection, greater inducements being offered than can be found elsewhere.

They offer 150 FINE SILK UMBRELLAS,

Handsome foreign mounted handles, 26 inch,

At $3.75 each; value $7 to $10.

500 IMPORTED JACKETS, NEWMARKETS

AND WRAPS,

LARGELY REDUCED IN PRICE.

JACKETS, $4.50, $6.00, $9.00;

reduced from $9.00, $12.50, $17.00.

NEWMARKETS, $7.50, $9, $12.50;

reduced from $14.00, $16.00, $19.00.

WRAPS, handsomely fur-trimmed,

reduced from $20.00, $25.00, $35.00.

50 EXTRA QUALITY ALASKA SEAL SACQUES,

BEST LONDON-DYED SKINS,

ALL SIZES,

40 TO 45 INCHES LONG,

AT $150.00 EACH;

REDUCED FROM $200.00.

Broadway, 4th Ave., 9th and 10th Sts.

THE FATES WERE AGAINST HIM.

[From the Boston Transcript.]

The experience of the man in Paris who attempted suicide by jumping from the Arc de Triomphe after taking a dose of poison, and was caught by a projecting spike and suspended in mid-air for a very bad quarter of an hour, lends the color of truth to a similar story which is good enough to be told again, if it is old. Determined to be rid of life, a man took a dose of poison, put his neck into a noose fastened to a scaffold on the edge of a cliff, held a pistol to his head, and as he jumped pulled the trigger. His theory was that if the rope broke the sea would swallow him, and there was also the chance that the pistol would do the business. But the fates were against him. As he jumped off his aim missed and the bullet cut the rope; he fell into the sea, but was rescued by a passing boat, while the water he had swallowed acted as an emetic, and the poison being rejected, his life was saved.

THE FATES WERE AGAINST HIM.

[From the Boston Transcript.]

The experience of the man in Paris who attempted suicide by jumping from the Arc de Triomphe after taking a dose of poison, and was caught by a projecting spike and suspended in mid-air for a very bad quarter of an hour, lends the color of truth to a similar story which is good enough to be told again, if it is old. Determined to be rid of life, a man took a dose of poison, put his neck into a noose fastened to a scaffold on the edge of a cliff, held a pistol to his head, and as he jumped pulled the trigger. His theory was that if the rope broke the sea would swallow him, and there was also the chance that the pistol would do the business. But the fates were against him. As he jumped off his aim missed and the bullet cut the rope; he fell into the sea, but was rescued by a passing boat, while the water he had swallowed acted as an emetic, and the poison being rejected, his life was saved.

THE FATES WERE AGAINST HIM.

[From the Boston Transcript.]

The experience of the man in Paris who attempted suicide by jumping from the Arc de Triomphe after taking a dose of poison, and was caught by a projecting spike and suspended in mid-air for a very bad quarter of an hour, lends the color of truth to a similar story which is good enough to be told again, if it is old. Determined to be rid of life, a man took a dose of poison, put his neck into a noose fastened to a scaffold on the edge of a cliff, held a pistol to his head, and as he jumped pulled the trigger. His theory was that if the rope broke the sea would swallow him, and there was also the chance that the pistol would do the business. But the fates were against him. As he jumped off his aim missed and the bullet cut the rope; he fell into the sea, but was rescued by a passing boat, while the water he had swallowed acted as an emetic, and the poison being rejected, his life was saved.

THE FATES WERE AGAINST HIM.

[From the Boston Transcript.]

The experience of the man in Paris who attempted suicide by jumping from the Arc de Triomphe after taking a dose of poison, and was caught by a projecting spike and suspended in mid-air for a very bad quarter of an hour, lends the color of truth to a similar story which is good enough to be told again, if it is old. Determined to be rid of life, a man took a dose of poison, put his neck into a noose fastened to a scaffold on the edge of a cliff, held a pistol to his head, and as he jumped pulled the trigger. His theory was that if the rope broke the sea would swallow him, and there was also the chance that the pistol would do the business. But the fates were against him. As he jumped off his aim missed and the bullet cut the rope; he fell into the sea, but was rescued by a passing boat, while the water he had swallowed acted as an emetic, and the poison being rejected, his life was saved.

THE FATES WERE AGAINST HIM.

[From the Boston Transcript.]

The experience of the man in Paris who attempted suicide by jumping from the Arc de Triomphe after taking a dose of poison, and was caught by a projecting spike and suspended in mid-air for a very bad quarter of an hour, lends the color of truth to a similar story which is good enough to be told again, if it is old. Determined to be rid of life, a man took a dose of poison, put his neck into a noose fastened to a scaffold on the edge of a cliff, held a pistol to his head, and as he jumped pulled the trigger. His theory was that if the rope broke the sea would swallow him, and there was also the chance that the pistol would do the business. But the fates were against him. As he jumped off his aim missed and the bullet cut the rope; he fell into the sea, but was rescued by a passing boat, while the water he had swallowed acted as an emetic, and the poison being rejected, his life was saved.

THE FATES WERE AGAINST HIM.

[From the Boston Transcript.]

The experience of the man in Paris who attempted suicide by jumping from the Arc de Triomphe after taking a dose of poison, and was caught by a projecting spike and suspended in mid-air for a very bad quarter of an hour, lends the color of truth to a similar story which is good enough to be told again, if it is old. Determined to be rid of life, a man took a dose of poison, put his neck into a noose fastened to a scaffold on the edge of a cliff, held a pistol to his head, and as he jumped pulled the trigger. His theory was that if the rope broke the sea would swallow him, and there was also the chance that the pistol would do the business. But the fates were against him. As he jumped off his aim missed and the bullet cut the rope; he fell into the sea, but was rescued by a passing boat, while the water he had swallowed acted as an emetic, and the poison being rejected, his life was saved.

THE FATES WERE AGAINST HIM.

[From the Boston Transcript.]

The experience of the man in Paris who attempted suicide by jumping from the Arc de Triomphe after taking a dose of poison, and was caught by a projecting spike and suspended in mid-air for a very bad quarter of an hour, lends the color of truth to a similar story which is good enough to be told again, if it is old. Determined to be rid of life, a man took a dose of poison, put his neck into a noose fastened to a scaffold on the edge of a cliff, held a pistol to his head, and as he jumped pulled the trigger. His theory was that if the rope broke the sea would swallow him, and there was also the chance that the pistol would do the business. But the fates were against him. As he jumped off his aim missed and the bullet cut the rope; he fell into the sea, but was rescued by a passing boat, while the water he had swallowed acted as an emetic, and the poison being rejected, his life was saved.

THE FATES WERE AGAINST HIM.

[From the Boston Transcript.]

The experience of the man in Paris who attempted suicide by jumping from the Arc de Triomphe after taking a dose of poison, and was caught by a projecting spike and suspended in mid-air for a very bad quarter of an hour, lends the color of truth to a similar story which is good enough to be told again, if it is old. Determined to be rid of life, a man took a dose of poison, put his neck into a noose fastened to a scaffold on the edge of a cliff, held a pistol to his head, and as he jumped pulled the trigger. His theory was that if the rope broke the sea would swallow him, and there was also the chance that the pistol would do the business. But the fates were against him. As he jumped off his aim missed and the bullet cut the rope; he fell into the sea, but was rescued by a passing boat, while the water he had swallowed acted as an emetic, and the poison being rejected, his life was saved.

THE FATES WERE AGAINST HIM.

[From the Boston Transcript.]

The experience of the man in Paris who attempted suicide by jumping from the Arc de Triomphe after taking a dose of poison, and was caught by a projecting spike and suspended in mid-air for a very bad quarter of an hour, lends the color of truth to a similar story which is good enough to be told again, if it is old. Determined to be rid of life, a man took a dose of poison, put his neck into a noose fastened to a scaffold on the edge of a cliff, held a pistol to his head, and as he jumped pulled the trigger. His theory was that if the rope broke the sea would swallow him, and there was also the chance that the pistol would do the business. But the fates were against him. As he jumped off his aim missed and the bullet cut the rope; he fell into the sea, but was rescued by a passing boat, while the water he had swallowed acted as an emetic, and the poison being rejected, his life was saved.

THE FATES WERE AGAINST HIM.

[From the Boston Transcript.]

The experience of the man in Paris who attempted suicide by jumping from the Arc de Triomphe after taking a dose of poison, and was caught by a projecting spike and suspended in mid-air for a very bad quarter of an hour, lends the color of truth to a similar story which is good enough to be told again, if it is old. Determined to be rid of life, a man took a dose of poison, put his neck into a noose fastened to a scaffold on the edge of a cliff, held a pistol to his head, and as he jumped pulled the trigger. His theory was that if the rope broke the sea would swallow him, and there was also the chance that the pistol would do the business. But the fates were against him. As he jumped off his aim missed and the bullet cut the rope; he fell into the sea, but was rescued by a passing boat, while the water he had swallowed acted as an emetic, and the poison being rejected, his life was saved.

B. Altman &amp; Co.,

ARE NOW OFFERING

IN

Boys' Clothing Dept.

BOYS' SUITS,

KILTS,

OVERCOATS and

REEFERS

OF THE MOST APPROVED

STYLES, AT MODERATE

PRICES.

18th Street, 19th Street and Sixth Avenue.

(18th St. Station Elevated Road.)

For Twenty-Five Dollars

We are now prepared to take your measure and make to order a WINTER OVERCOAT of the IMPORTED FUR BEAVER, SATIN

LINED THROUGHOUT, swelled seams,

Silk Velvet Collar, edges stitched, lined with cloth or tubular braid, at the option of the buyer, in fact, a first-class Overcoat in every respect, such as will ordinarily cost fifty dollars.

GEO. A. CASTOR & CO.,

TAILORS,

BROADWAY AND 18TH ST.,

ALSO

267 Broadway, Opposite City Hall Park.

ALL MEN who are Debilitated

by any of the following ailments, or who wish to be GUARANTEED TO LIVE and feel the effects of a

RENEWED BELT AND SUSPENSORY

will find it to be a

RENEWED BELT AND SUSPENSORY

will find it to be a

RENEWED BELT AND SUSPENSORY

will find it to be a

RENEWED BELT AND SUSPENSORY

will find it to be a

RENEWED BELT AND SUSPENSORY

will find it to be a

RENEWED BELT AND SUSPENSORY

will find it to be a

RENEWED BELT AND SUSPENSORY

will find it to be a

RENEWED BELT AND